

Reminder - Treatment for Gonorrhoea

Hello

However, I can still not see that you have participated in contact tracing or received treatment for your infection. Under the Communicable Diseases Act, you are required to cooperate with contact tracing. All healthcare staff are bound by strict confidentiality, and all information disclosed during your visit is protected by medical confidentiality laws.

Gonorrhoea is a bacterial infection that is treated with antibiotics. If left untreated, gonorrhoea may cause infertility. Treatment is provided free of charge. Using a condom during sexual activity offers good protection against gonorrhoea. You are required to inform and protect your sexual contacts until your treatment has been completed.

Contact the Sexual Health Clinic as soon as possible!

If we have not heard from you within two weeks, your case will be referred to the Communicable Disease Control Physician, as you are legally required under the Communicable Diseases Act to cooperate with contact tracing.
